

About our Products

Spirit Works Distillery Vodka

Our Vodka is distilled from organic, California-grown Hard Red Winter Wheat from the Sacramento-Valley area. The difference lies in the grain-to-glass production philosophy that Spirit Works Distillery embraces. We begin with whole grain that we then mill, mash, ferment, and distill entirely onsite. By controlling each step of the production process, we are able to preserve the distinct characteristics of the wheat. The vodka displays sweet caramel and warm earthy notes, like the grain itself, and provides a round mouth feel and extremely smooth finish.

Spirit Works Distillery Gin

Our Gin starts with whole grains of organic California Red Winter Wheat, which are milled, mashed, fermented, and distilled, entirely by hand at the Distillery. This meticulous 'grain-to-glass' process maintains the distinct characteristic of the grain, creating a round and slightly sweet base spirit. It is classically distilled with juniper berries, along with traditional old-world and fresh California botanicals. Some of these ingredients are macerated directly in the pot, while some delicate botanicals are hung in the neck of the still for vapor infusion. This gin has spicy notes of cardamom and coriander, fresh lemon and orange zest, earthy angelica and orris root, and floral hibiscus.

Spirit Works Distillery Sloe Gin

Our Sloe Gin is currently the only traditional sloe gin produced in the USA. Sloe berries are the fruit of the blackthorn bush and are a tiny relative of the plum. We begin with whole sloe berries and steep them in our gin then finish it off with cane sugar. Two pounds of berries, imported from Europe, are used to make just one bottle of Spirit Works Distillery Sloe Gin. The tradition, and recipe, has been handed down through the Marshall family for generations. In the UK, foraging the wild berries and steeping them in gin has been part of rural family heritage for centuries. Traditionally, sloe gin is served after a meal as a digestif like port, but it has quickly become a popular cocktail ingredient with mixologists for its unique color and flavor.

Barrel Gin

To create Spirit Works Distillery Barrel Gin, we began with our gin and let it rest in a brand new, 53-gallon, American White Oak barrel. Each month we tasted it until we finally achieved the balance we were hoping for. We wanted a final product that allowed the botanicals in our gin to be enhanced by time in the barrel, not overpowered by it. The Red Winter Wheat base provides a subtle sweetness and round mouth feel. Hand-zested citrus turned to candied lemon and orange and notes of coriander and cardamom add a subtle spice. Rich vanilla and butterscotch from the barrel can be found both on the nose and in the finish. We recommend sipping this spirit neat or using it to elevate your favorite gin cocktail.

Spirit Works Distillery Barrel Reserve Sloe Gin

Our Barrel Reserve Sloe Gin is the first, and only, of its kind. We had never heard of a barrel-aged Sloe Gin before, and the temptation was too much. We began with Spirit Works Distillery Sloe Gin and, much like with our Barrel Gin, let it rest in a brand new, 53-gallon, American White Oak barrel for several months. Time in the barrel rounded the tart characteristics of the sloes and the result is a rich and full-bodied liqueur with a velvety mouth-feel. Boasting with notes of clove, cardamom, and orange peel, this truly one of a kind product is the perfect sip at the end of any meal.
